

Niki Lauda: February 22, 1949 – May 20, 2019

By Jim Weed

Formula One driver, entrepreneur and consultant Niki Lauda passed away after a short illness in Zurich, Switzerland. He was 70 years old.

One of the more difficult things I have to write is an obituary. Often, I have had some personal connection with the deceased; one of the hazards of being around Ferraris for so long.

I never met Niki Lauda but I followed his life from the time he first drove for Ferrari in 1974. His determination to follow his heart is a story we should all take note of.

Born on February 22, 1949, in Vienna his early life must have been good. His grandfather was wealthy and his early life included training in good manners. The wealth would not support or help him when he decided to enter automobile racing.

Boldly he borrowed to purchase the Mini Cooper he first raced in hillclimbs. This was traded in for a Porsche 911, once again with borrowed money. Going even deeper into debt he was able to join a Formula V team.

This experience allowed Lauda to gain knowledge in both driving and the technical side of racing. His next acquisition was a Porsche 908. He quickly came to the realization Sports Car racing was not the direct route to his goal of Formula One.

The logical way would be to join a Formula III team and work his way up. For 1970 he joined the McNamara Formula III team and spent the year honing his craft. Combined with the 908 his season was at least fruitful with wins in the 908 and much experience in the Formula car.

Lauda was able to borrow more money to bring to March and purchase a Formula II ride for 1971. As second to Ronnie Peterson on the team he continued to study the art of driving and was able to expand his technical knowledge.

The lackluster year meant that Lauda had paid back only one-third of the borrowed funds. The balance was formidable. He was offered a combination Formula II and Formula I drive in the March for 1972. All he needed was more money.

The amount he needed to raise could only be satisfied by a bank. Unfortunately his grandfather went to the president of his current creditor to lobby for no further funding. The grandfather won and Lauda was left to source funds on his own.

Determined to succeed, he was able to get a loan from Raiffeisen Bank for enough money to pay off his previous loans and pay March for the next Formula season. All of this was secured with an equal amount life insurance policy. A bold move it was.

The March Formula One team for 1972 did not field a very competitive car. Lauda won one race in the Formula II car and had dismal finishes or retirements in many other races.

Things had to get better. Lauda approached BRM and was offered a contract. He needed to bring more money to drive for BRM. The balancing act became more precarious. While earning the starting and prize money he was able to hold off BRM receiving the non-existent sponsor money.

At the season's third race, BRM number one driver

Raiffeisen Bank logo

Clay Regazzoni was injured and Lauda became the non-paying number one driver negating the need to find more funding. His performance during the rest of the season caught the eye of Ferrari and he signed to drive in 1974.

The contract was lucrative enough to pay off all his previous debts. Lauda could now exploit his driving abilities with a team that could win.

Niki Lauda earned the World Champion title for Ferrari in 1975 and 1977.

No report could omit one of the greatest racing stories of determination and perseverance. In the 1976 Nürburgring race Lauda crashed and the car caught fire. Although severely burned he fought back and missed only two races. His lead in the World Championship was so great that even after missing two races he was still in the lead.

Only after Lauda stopped in the last race of the season in Japan (due to horrendous weather circumstances) did James Hunt win the Championship by one point.

The rivalry between those two protagonists was immortalized in the movie Rush. If you haven't seen it, it rates right up there with Steve McQueen in LeMans as one of the all-time greatest racing films.

While Lauda did win the World Championship title in 1977, the tension of the previous year's final race and loss of the championship soured the relationship with Ferrari. Lauda then moved onto Brabham.

The time with Brabham was not good for Lauda. After two years of failing to consistently finish races, Lauda retired from racing.

The entrepreneur in Lauda allowed him to create Lauda Air in 1979. Lauda Air started operations in 1985 and was primarily a charter and taxi service airline. Lauda Air was merged into Austrian Airlines in 2013. In all, Niki Lauda was associated with three different airlines.

McLaren was able to entice Niki Lauda to return to racing in 1982 with an unprecedented salary of $3 million. While the first two years with McLaren were not winning, the development of the chassis and a change to a TAG Porsche V-6 turbo engine helped Lauda to win a third World Championship in 1984.

McLaren could not put Lauda into a winning car for 1985 but team mate Alain Prost did win the World Championship for McLaren. Lauda retired again from racing in 1985 never to return to competitive driving.

Lauda returned to managing his airline and doing consulting work for both Ferrari and Jaguar.

In 2012 he moved to the Mercedes AMG Petronas F1 Team providing guidance and through his management skills being able to keep Lewis Hamilton as driver for Mercedes.

Niki Lauda also wrote five books. The Art and Science of Grand Prix Driving was his first book from 1975 and is an excellent book on the technicalities of Formula One car design and considerations. Another is My Years with Ferrari from 1978 and explains the inner workings at Ferrari. The details of the politics inside Ferrari are laid bare. An excellent book and high on a must-read list for Lauda and Ferrari.

Niki Lauda did not win the most championships, nor the most races, he does not rate in the top ten of all-time great drivers, but he came at the right time to bring Championships back to Ferrari. No one can doubt his perseverance and courage to come back from horrific injuries.

Niki Lauda stayed close to Formula One helping many teams, earning the respect of the owners, organizers and fans alike. He will be sorely missed.

The Eyes Have It

By Dom Miliano

A few years ago, I was photographing a lovely Series II Ferrari 250 GT Cabriolet in far off Lancaster, PA, owned by Roy Brod – someone I had only recently met at a concours.

The car was, to my eyes and, as it happened, the eyes of the judges, stunning, and I wanted to share it by doing a road test for Forza magazine. While shooting photos, I like to make small talk to keep the owner involved in the process. I have always been able to take decent photographs while gabbing – kind of a left-brain, right-brain thing.

When I asked Roy what he did for a living, his reply was a modest, “I’m an eye doctor.” I offered my regrets that he lived so far away since my regular eye guy had just announced his retirement. Roy said, “I’m not a regular eye doctor, I’m a retina specialist.” Not knowing what that meant, he said he would be happy to show me with a free eye exam after we were done shooting.

Since I have had very myopic vision and other eye concerns since grammar school, I said “Yes!”

As we drove to his office (I was expecting something like a “Lenscrafters”) I was shocked to see that he was taking us to a huge, modern, professional building. His offices took up most of the top floor with more equipment than I had ever seen in any workplace.

Doctor Roy (a name that I now decided to call him) used eye drops to dilate my pupils and then proceeded to give me the most thorough eye exam I had ever had.

After looking in my right eye, he made that “Hmmm” sound that you really don’t want to hear from a doctor. He asked me if I had recently experienced a variety of vision “events” – describing them with scary accuracy.

I told him that I had and wanted to know what they meant. “You had a partially detached retina in your right eye that has healed itself,” he said with a bit of concern in his voice. As one of my Jewish friends might say, “I almost plotzed.”

Doctor Roy then gave me sage advice. “Be on the lookout for new eye floaters and bright flashes.” He warned that these are signs of possibly serious retina issues.

Leap ahead a few years – I’m assigned to photograph a vintage race at Lime Rock Park over the Labor Day Weekend. As I walked down a dark hallway, I suddenly saw camera strobe-like flashes in my left eye.

When I told my wife, she got worried and said I should go to the emergency room. Instead, I called Doctor Roy. He asked a few diagnostic questions and then said four words: “You should be seen...” Since this was happening on a Saturday, I asked if he thought it could wait until the Tuesday after Labor Day. He gave me a definite “No” and offered to have a look if I could get to his place on Sunday. More than a little panicked, we set a time and made plans to make the nearly three-hour trip first thing Sunday.

My wife drove with me (bless her heart) but as we rode in near silence, I wondered if I was overreacting. Doctor Roy opened his office for me and whisked me into an examination room immediately. After the application of eye drops to open things up, he started examining my right eye – the one he said had a partial, self-healed detachment.

After a couple of minutes he said, “I’m going to have to fix that some day...” The panic meter went off the chart – I had just heard that I needed eye surgery!

And then he looked in my left eye. What he said next was the most attention grabbing words a doctor could ever say. “Oh $#!T...” My wife leaned forward when she heard what he said and that’s when things got really serious.

Doctor Roy put on a super powerful magnifying eyepiece equipped with a very powerful light. He kept looking and then said another heart stopping question, “What’s your tolerance for pain?”

Without going into too many gory details, he numbed my eye using a process that was, shall we say, truly uncomfortable. Then, using a technique he called “Cryo” (I thought it was called that because I was ready to cry OH!), he froze four rips in my left retina, sealing them to prevent a full detachment. I asked my wife how bad my eye looked since she was standing alongside the chair. “Raw chopped meat” was all she said just as Doctor Roy put a huge gauze patch over my eye.

That was the first of three procedures I had done by Doctor Brod – another tear opened in the left and he then sealed the partial detachment in the right – all operations done over the course of a few weeks.

Today, my vision is 20/20 (although I do have a few floaters) and I have my connection with Ferrari and the skilled hands of Ferrari-owner Doctor Roy Brod to thank for that.

Ferraris bring us joy. They are a reward for success and a way to celebrate the best things that life has to offer. But for me, Ferraris have also helped me keep my eyesight and for that, I’ll always be grateful.
